 The Holiday Season is almost here

Information about the products

Mexico is an area that can greatly affect the markets. This country has experienced periods of cold, which has slowed production and reduced availability. This situation has persisted since the beginning of November which corresponds to the first harvest of Florida. The West Coast customers buy from Florida and Thanksgiving created an excess demand. Even if the producers of Florida are subjected to volume declines, the demand exceeds supply. Also, the tomato markets remains firm and sometimes increase in the end of November. According to our informations, Florida should have good future volumes. If the weather improves in Mexico, the combination of both should make react the down market. The future will tell.

Peppers

A month and a half ago, the West Coast of United States received a lot of rain. This phenomenon has reduced the flowering plants and at the same time the flowering plants of peppers. Moreover, cold temperatures experienced in Mexico have also slowed their production. The request created by Thanksgiving did not help, the market of green peppers remain firm. The quality is good and better volumes to come.

Cucumbers

In the past few months, English cucumbers came 100 % from Ontario Greenhouse. The fall season has significantly reduced the rate of sunshine since the days are shorter. In this region, the cucumber's volumes are decreasing and we should have those in Mexico at the end of November or early December. We will possibly have english cucumbers from Spain.

Onions

Red onions come from Hermiston Oregon in United States. The quality is very good and prices are stable.

Transport

There will possibly be an increase for transportation costs for December. The holidays season is creating excess demand.
