INFORMATION ON THE PRODUCE:

TOMATOES:

The season for Georgia tomatoes (packaged in Quincy) is now completed. The South Carolina productions should be completed towards July, 07th or 08th. Thereafter, we will begin to purchase the tomatoes in Virginia. On the West Coast, California began its crops last week and they will produce until the end of September or early October. The market for this product is currently down.

PEPPERS

The season for Georgian green peppers is now over. North Carolina is currently in production and the area of New Jersey should provide a better availability for July 12th, if the weather permits it. Local peppers or peppers coming from Quebec are provided for the last week of July. The market for green pepper is also down.

CUCUMBERS

English cucumbers come from Leamington greenhouses, in Ontario. Due to warmer temperatures, there are more available volumes . Obviously this leads to lower prices.

ONIONS

Our supplies are coming from California. As the volumes are presently moderated, prices remain high. This situation should change after the new crops from Mexico.

TRANSPORTATION

The state of high Canadian dollar, the U.S. economic crisis and the cost of oil are still ensure that transportation costs remain high. By cons, such as local products in Quebec are more available now, the transportation demand decreases. In addition, our purchases of tomatoes and green peppers are carried out in closer areas which lowers our transportation costs.
